It begins to look like the Cubs had to beat both Giants and President Lynch for National League pennant.

Yesterday Lynch suspended John Evers for five days because of the Trojan's argument with Umpire Finneran Saturday. This will keep the second baseman out of the first two clashes with the Giants here Thursday and Friday.

Five days is an unusual time for a player to be suspended. The usual punishment is a three-day lay-off.

Heinie Zimmerman was also fined $50 for arguing.

New York players who have committed as great offenses as did Evers are usually fined lightly, seldom suspended, and never on the eve of a Cub series. There are many queer angles to Lynch's recent actions, among them his suspending of Tinker and Zimmerman in a former Giant series.

Even without Evers the Cubs crept up on the Giants yesterday. Downs subbed for John. His fielding was ragged, but he did great execution with the stick against Tyler and Hess.

Lavender started for Cubs, but was wild, and when he did stick the ball over Boston batsmen clubbed it.

Charley Smith pitched the last seven innings and gave Boston 7 hits.

Ward Miller was again in left for Sheppard. He cracked a double and three singles out of six trips to the block.

Sheck was shoved into the game in the second when Tommy Leach hurt his leg. Jim singled twice in two attempts.

Zimmerman, Saier and Schulte poled two hits each.

Boston slugged away the Cubs' early lead and at one period of the game led, 7 to 6.

Callahan used Ed Walsh, but even the one best bet failed to win for the sorrowful Sox.

The boss shifted his line-up, sending Harry Lord to the outfield and putting Zeider on third. The new combination secured 9 hits off Kaler, but they were used where they would do least damage.

Walsh stopped the Naps dead in every inning but the fourth, when Davis' men got four hits for three runs.

In the other seven innings they hit safely three times.

John Collins, who led both teams with a double and single, failed when he had a chance to break up the game for the Sox.

South Siders' only run came on a double by Collins and a single by Ernie Johnson. This youngster is not slugging, but his hits are opportune.

A medal for the Cards! Again they beat Giants.
